MARUTI SUZUKI INVICTO

Maruti Suzuki joins the big league with its new flagship car—a cross-badged version of the Toyota Innova Hycross—that will be sold via the Nexa dealerships. Visually, the Invicto does differ from the Hycross, as it gets a different grille, front bumper and 17-inch alloy wheels. In terms of features, it gets an eight-way-powered driver seat with memory function, ventilated front seats and dual-zone climate control for front and rear rows, a 10.1-inch touchscreen infotainment system, 7-inch coloured MID with drive mode themes, rear door sunshades, powered tailgate, 360-degree view monitor and ambient lighting.

MERCEDES-BENZ G-CLASS G400d

Mercedes-Benz India has launched the new G-Class SUV, available in just one diesel engine variant—the most powerful one yet from the brand. It is offering the G400d in the AMG Line and the India-specific Adventure Edition, with the latter boasting some extra features to justify the adventure tag. Visually, it carries on the same iconic look—the unmistakable G-Wagen appearance with the squared-off body in tandem with the round headlamps, exposed spare wheel and the side-hinged rear door.
