DEEPINDER GOYAL, 40

FOUNDER & CEO, ZOMATO

DELIVERY KING

BECAUSE despite headwinds, he managed to stabilise his food delivery firm's stock performance in the range of Rs 65 to Rs 75 in the past one year. With an m-cap of Rs 56,400 crore, Zomato is one of the most valued among indigenous start-ups

BECAUSE his decision to list Zomato in 2021 gave a boost to the industry. Now when the segment is in correction mode amid shrinking margins and even his firm is facing a strike by grocery delivery workers and competition from the government-backed ONDC, Goyal's moves are expected to redefine the sector

ANGEL INVESTOR Goyal is a serial investor and has pumped funds into start-ups like SquadStack, Bira 91, HyperTrack and TerraDo

BECAUSE Goyal's pragmatic views on giving extended period leave to women employees, openness to experiment with new business ideas like the delivery of home-cooked meals and intercity food delivery, and the decision to launch a home services vertical in the instant-delivery e-commerce firm Blinkit (which he acquired last year) is setting new standards for his peers
