

dance—because it belongs to them. Experientially, therefore, their satsangs strike you less as rupture, more as continuum. The vibe is intimate, organic, as if welling up from the ground. Pastor vocabulary, sometimes gleaned from training stints at the New Theology College in Dehradun or the Indian Bible College and Seminary in Kerala, is superimposed on that, but the dialect is thoroughly local and touched by farm soil—tithe donations (one-tenth of income as offering at a church) become daswand.

Depending on how dramatic the individual pas-

SPRAWLING CHURCHSCAPE

1. The Ankur Narula ministry's under-construction church

2. A modest church in Guru ki Wadali, Amritsar

3. A turreted church on the outskirts of Amritsar

4. A church on Batala's outskirts

5. A church in Nangal Dyal Singh village in Amritsar district