1973
Zanjeer, directed by Prakash Mehra and written by Salim-Javed, ends Amitabh's misery after registering 13 consecutive flops. The action drama marks the advent of the 'Angry Young Man' who manages to voice the angst of the age—the pre-Emergency era—and presages the rebellious spirit of its youth. The Bachchan reign is inaugurated.

JUNE 3, 1973
Marries his Zanjeer co-star Jaya Bhaduri in Bombay. They have two kids, Shweta (1974-) and Abhishek (1976-). The year also sees a memorable pairing in Abhimaan, where he plays the jealous husband of a successful wife, besides another award-winning support role in Namak Haraam.

1974
Displeased with gossip around his personal life, Bachchan stops giving interviews to the film press. The magazines retaliate with a boycott of their own.

1975
The year sees two of Amitabh's biggest blockbusters, Deewaar and Sholay. The latter opens to negative reviews (INDIA TODAY says: 'Sholay's dubious message is, in fact, more disturbing than entertaining') and is prematurely labelled a flop, before going on to rewrite film history. On the side, there's Mili with Jaya.

1976
Amitabh and Rekha do their first film as romantic leads, Do Anjaane. So popular is the pairing that the two go on to do 12 films in five years, the last being extra-marital drama Silsila (1981), which also features Jaya as his wife. But 1976 also sees an intense romantic drama in Kabhi Kabhie, and an offbeat take in Alaap.
