India, more than 3,000-plus B-schools produce more than 300,000 management graduates every year. Yet, as several surveys and estimates have often found, less than 20 per cent of these pass-outs are employable. With the pandemic disrupting the education cycle in the last two years, the qualitative output of many institutes has suffered massively. In an emerging world, transformed by the onslaught of the coronavirus, digitisation has either made several human skills redundant or demanded constant innovation and value addition to the existing skills. That is why education institutes face increasingly tougher and newer challenges to produce human resources relevant and competent to meet the requirements of the new social and economic order.

In this context, the results of the INDIA TODAY-MDRA Best Business Schools survey have assumed even higher significance. With the rising cost of business education and the shrinking space for employment with existing skills, students need to figure out which institutes have the vision and infrastructure for pedagogy that will prepare them for the evolving work environment. The best B-schools have shown that they remain alert to future challenges.

Not surprisingly, the traditional best performers have retained their strongholds in the 2022 version of the INDIA TODAY-MDRA Best Business Schools survey, which saw the participation of 281 institutions. Continuing from last year, the Indian Institute of Management Calcutta has once again emerged as the No. 1 B-school in the country, followed by the Indian Institute of Management Ahmedabad at No. 2 and the Indian Institute of Management Bangalore at No. 3. The IIMs occupy five of the top 10 positions. Among the private institutes, SP Jain Institute of Management and Research (SPJIMR) retains its numero uno position from last year, occupying the fifth position in overall rankings. In fact, there has been no change in the top 10 rankings of the survey while the next 50 have shown some minor movements.

What binds the toppers is their approach to balancing traditional management principles with contemporary skills. If IIM Bangalore is emphasising digital, data, and environmental, social and governance (ESG)-related skills to help students catch changing trends, the IIM Ahmedabad has begun offering courses in digital strategy and transformation, as well as digital marketing. For SPJIMR, the focus in their core courses is on finding solutions in a new environment. However, what's worrying is the gap between the top-ranking institutes and those at the bottom. This year, in a total achievable score of 1,000, the difference in overall scores between the top and bottom B-schools was 623 points. Even among the top 10 institutes, the gap between the first and No. 10 is quite significant—115 points. There is an urgent need to reduce such a qualitative gap to create a higher pool of competent and future-ready managers. And that's the purpose of this survey—to constantly encourage healthy competition among India's B-schools so that management education gets a collective boost. ■
