NEW INITIATIVES

- A four-year bachelor's in Social Work, the first undergraduate programme the TISS School of Social Work will offer, in addition to the master's and PhD courses it already has
- The School of Social Work's Centre for Community Organisation & Development Practice recently started the M. Subramanian Endowment Lecture series with Magsaysay award winner Dr Rajendra Singh, popularly known as the 'Waterman of India'

The return of faculty members to the campus had to be smooth; desktop computers, which remained shut for two years had to be replaced, and extra-curricular activities that had come to a standstill had to be revived. And that included the annual public lecture series and the festival, Sameeksha.

However, the biggest initiative that TISS took last year was devising the new bachelor's in Social Work as per the National Education Policy, 2020. "It was an active and engaging time to debate and deliberate, and it's a huge development," says Jojo. After receiving around 19,000 applications, TISS will welcome its first batch of 30-40 students in August.

For those who are already on campus, such as Shreya Varier, part of SoSW's Mental
