key tool to achieving sustainability, especially with only a few years left to accomplish the 17 sustainable development goals (SDGs) outlined by the various member countries of the United Nations in its 2030 agenda. As a step towards this, a certificate course on 'Developing the Skills to Meet Sustainable Development Goals' was initiated by the Green Chemistry Network Centre at Hindu College. A workshop on 'Nature-based Solutions and Climate Change Mitigation' was also organised with the support of the UN.

It has also been organising workshops and training programmes in collaboration with the Royal Society of Chemistry, UK. "Several value-added courses have been introduced in collaboration with IIT Delhi under the PMRF (Prime Minister's Research Fellowship) scheme which have theoretical as well as research components. They have all been extremely successful," says Anju Srivastava, the principal of Hindu College. This has meant a lot many interactive sessions for the faculty and students with mentors and PMRF scholars.

The college has also started several student-centred initiatives such as extension activities (with emphasis on community action), summer-winter

ALUMNISPEAK

"Hindu College was such a happening place, buzzing with activity. There were so many interesting things like nukkad natak and fests. I sat for campus placement and not only did I make it, I got compliments for my communication skills. My college years were the best years, a period of great change and personal growth, and I will always treasure it"
