INITIATIVES

- The Maulana Azad Institute of Dental Sciences has formalised an academic collaboration with the Tufts University in Boston for student-faculty exchange and research
- The institute plans to introduce PhD programmes in all clinical specialities with Delhi University. The process for this has already started and it should be finalised in a few months, says Dr Sangeeta Talwar, principal, MAIDS
- The institute plans to launch a dental hygienist course and another to train students as a dental operating room assistant

The national tobacco cessation centre at MAIDS trains dentists and other medical professionals to identify and help patients who smoke. "The first sign of tobacco use is in the oral cavity, and dentists have a really important role to play. Our students are trained in tobacco cessation protocol," says Dr Talwar.

The overarching aim at MAIDS is to train dentists who are not just responsible professionals but who also carry a streak of innovation in them and value social responsibility and entrepreneurship. Dentistry, as Dr Talwar says, is more than just filling cavities and deep cleaning. ■
